DECORATION GUIDELINES AND LOCATIONS

Hero Hoodie Classic (MAFZH-R1)

- All decoration techniques can be used
- Low bleed plastisol ink and poly blocker recommended
- Use sleeve pallet for the backpack by inserting it into the interior pocket
- Keep garment temperature under 320°

DECORATION AREAS

- Always do your own testing prior to a production run
- Chest, backpack, back, and sleeves are the primary print locations
- Recommend keeping art at least 1" from all zippers and seams
- Convert to a backpack prior to loading it onto the pallet to print the backpack
- When printing on the back of the garment, load the pallet inside the pouch lining
- Use a poly blocker base with low bleed plastisol inks
- Flash until dry to touch: 3-8 sec

Dryflip Windbreaker (AWB)

- Low cure poly ink and poly blocker recommended
- Heat transfer on low heat with medium pressure
- Keep garment temperature under 300°
- Embroidery not recommended

Due to uniform fabric throughout, take extra precaution to ensure you are printing on the correct side of the backpack once converted to prevent the print from showing through the back of the garment.

Dryflip Rain Jacket (ARJ-R1)

- Low cure poly ink and poly blocker recommended
- Heat transfer on low heat with medium pressure
- Keep garment temperature under 300°
- Use sleeve pallet for the backpack by inserting it into the interior pocket
- Embroidery not recommended

We got your back[®]

All my life I've been frustrated by the fact that there was never an efficient way to carry an unworn sweatshirt. Like all of us, I'd leave the house in my favorite hoodie, but as soon as the temperature warmed up, I'd end up taking it off at which point, I regretted bringing it altogether. The final straw came on December 27, 2016, when I was at the park with my son. To avoid tying my unworn hoodie around my waist, I decided to throw it over my shoulder. When I bent over to scoop him up, the hoodie slipped off my shoulder and onto the wet grass. That was it. I knew I had to invent a better way, and Quikflip was born.

We started off with a single product, the full-zip french terry Hero Hoodie. We ordered 5,000 units as a test run, and we sold out in 30 days. That's when the requests started pouring in for other convertible garments. Today we offer a full assortment -- windbreakers, pullovers, rain jackets -- and everything we make changes functionality with the weather!

What started off as an attempt to create a more efficient way to carry an unworn hoodie, has snowballed into a full-blown convertibility revolution with a growing legion of loyal customers all over the world!

Welcome to Team Quikflip. We're glad you made it, and no matter where life takes you, we got your back!
